DETAILED ACTION

Drawings

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over An et al (US 6,335,719) in view of Nomura et al (US 5,881,299).

As to claim 1, An et al teach a thin-film transistor (TFT) liquid crystal display panel (10) associated with a method (column 4, lines 25-27) comprising an application specific integrated circuit (ASIC) (column 6, lines 57-58), a liquid crystal panel (10) having the thin-film transistor array is divided into a number of blocks (a plurality of zones, column 3, lines 40-42).

An et al fail to teach a predetermined mode. However, Nomura et al teach a related display device associated a method comprising a predetermined switch (26), a graphic area (2), and non-graphic area (1) (figure 1, column 4, lines 18-46). It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to utilize the predetermined switch (26) taught by Nomura et al for An et al's display device because this would provide the display control can be carried out in accordance with an amount of information to be displayed, while reducing power consumption (column 2, lines 43-45 of Nomura et al).

As to claim 2, Nomura et al teach a switch (26) is closed by a cover (32) to save a power when display area (2) is not displayed (the predetermined mode is a standby mode, column 4, lines 41-46)

As to claim 3, Nomura et al teach a display area (1) is a graphic mode (figure 1, column 4, lines 66-67).

As to claim 4, Nomura et al teach the display area (2) is a video mode (figure 2A, column 4, lines 56-57).

As to claims 5 and 6, Nomura et al fail to teach a predetermined mode is dictated by the manufacturer, the graphic and non-graphic region located on a frame are determined by the manufacturer. Official Notice is taken that both the concept and the advantages of providing for displays which include a logo of their manufacturer during standby mode of an arbitrary line of a frame are well known and expected in the art. It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have include the logo display in Nomura as these display are known to provide the operator with a trade name of a product to adverse their product on the market.

As to claims 7 and 8, An et al review the driving type in the graphic region and the non-graphic region using a line inversion and a frame inversion (column 1, lines 21-24).

As to claims 9 and 10, Nomura et al teach the predetermined switch (26) is controlled by a central processing unit (CPU) (10), CPU (10) associated with an operating system for the display screen (figure 1, column 4, lines 36-40).

As to claim 11, An et al teach the ASIC chip associated with a method of signaling and dividing the display area into the plurality of areas (A, B, C, D) (figure 4, column 4, lines 3-8).
